

Curriculum Vitae

Bobby D. Burger, M.B.A.

Synopsys:

Being a teacher has always been my biggest asset. In addition to my executive professional experience with over 27 years of management, operations, project management, logistics, and supply chain, I have teaching future leaders through classroom and experiential processes. I am classified as an Industry Professional for Adjunct Instructors within the California State University system and have been teaching consistently for over five years. This expertise and excellence in teaching has led to my selection as Adjunct Instructor for Supply Chain and Logistics at California State University Maritime Academy and Adjunct Instructor with Holy Names University teaching Data Analysis and Statistical Modeling. I possess an expansive breadth of knowledge in project and program management, supply chain and logistics including financial analysis, marketing, vendor relations, procurement, new product introduction, content management, product life cycle, human capital management, and the below listed operations attributes. I developed executive skills as the assistant to numerous military executives and three organizations in varied corporate sectors and am versed and accustomed to high operations tempo environments. I have consistently delivered exceptional results in worldwide, deployed locations under extreme conditions. My professional experience, education, military, and corporate knowledge and experience culminate in superior operations executive positions. I remain dedicated and positioned to improve organizational operations and shareholder value.
